CONSUMER BEHAVIOR: CONCEPTS AND APPLICATIONS (MCGRAW-HILL SERIES IN MARKETING) BY DAVID L. LOUDON, ALBERT J. DELLA BITTA PDF

"Consumer Behaviour, 4/e", is written as an introduction to consumer behaviour for the advanced marketing student and is comprehensive and challenging enough to be used at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. It starts with a macro approach, moving in a logical progression from the societal (extremal influences) to the level of the individual, and incorporates marketing realism by emphasizing the application of concepts using questions, projects and cases for discussion and student decision making. The pedagogical elements of the text also include a list of learning objectives and opening vignettes at the start of each chapter. A highly distinctive feature of this edition is the new comprehensive chapter on Organizational Buying Behaviour which broadens the conception of the consumer to include industrial markets. The material in the chapter on cultures and subcultures has been substantially revised and expanded, and now provides more coverage than most texts. 17 and 20 cases are new and offer opportunities for extensive discussion. Also available - instructor's manual (ISBN 0-07-038768-0), test bank (0-07-038769-9) and overhead transparencies (0-07-074484-x).

Very precise and easy to understand.

By A Customer

With a back ground of psychology I found this book very interesting. Two years back i was supervising two of my M.Phil students for their thesis on "Life style inventory" and "reference group influences". During that process i got hold of this book and found it very use full. I think this is very comprehensive book for my M.Sc.Psychology students also who are intending to specialize in organiztional psy. and offering a course of consumer psy. and research in marketing.
