Your mission (should you decide to accept it) is to buy multiple copies of this book, read it carefully, and then get it into the hands of as many prisoners as possible. I am aware of no prisoner-written book more important than this one, at least not since George Jackson's Blood In My Eye. Revolutionaries and those considering the path of progress will find Kevin Rashid Johnson's Defying The Tomb an important contribution to their political development. --Ed Mead, former political prisoner, George Jackson Brigade

The correspondence of Rashid and Outlaw, carried on within the tenuous cracks of a supermax prison, offers the reader a compelling blend of psychological insight, political analysis, and passion for learning. Their defiance in the face of oppression is matched by their broad human solidarity. As they grapple with ideas, they also think as organizers, probing the dispositions and motivations of their fellow prisoners. Their struggle for justice is informed by a commitment to reason. --Victor Wallis, Professor, Liberal Arts Department, Berklee College of Music

Follow the author's odyssey from lumpen drug dealer to prisoner, to revolutionary New Afrikan, a teacher and mentor, one of a new generation rising of prison intellectuals. This book consists primarily of letters between Rashid and Outlaw, another revolutionary New Afrikan prisoner, smuggled between the segregation wing and general population over a period of months. These comrades educate themselves—and us as well—on Marxism and Maoism, the Five-Percenter, Dialectical Materialism, Dead Prez, Capitalism, Racism, Imperialism, Class Struggle, Revolutionary Nationalism, New Afrikan Independence, Psychology, and a host of other subjects, as they grapple with how to promote revolutionary consciousness in the most hostile of environments.

Rashid has been in prison for twenty years—the past eighteen of which in segregation (solitary confinement). Shortly after this correspondence between himself and Outlaw, he and his comrade Shaka Sankofa Zulu founded the New Afrikan Black Panther Party–Prison Chapter. The NABPP-PC has since developed branches in various prisons across the u$ empire and has its own newsletter, Right On! A number of Rashid's essays written as Minister of Defense of the NABPP-PC are also included in this book.

must read; support your local publisher

By clement

a must-read collection of writings from several incarcerated brothers (plus some powerful art by the main author, kevin "rashid" johnson). regardless of where you are coming from politically, morally, humanly, spiritually, . . . the musings of these minds will affect you and move you and inspire you. reread them. annotate this book. follow your questions and hunches; do your own research. and most important, spread the word. i usually purchase this from the publisher (check him out at[...] and follow the link on that page to [...] to see his offerings), but i felt a pressing need to get a copy to a young man behind bars, so i scored a quick copy from amazon. thank you, amazon: he received the book in time.

A prisoner's view of the powerful and the powerless

By Patricia Spicer

Defying the Tomb by Kevin "Rashid" Johnson was an extraordinary book by an incarcerated and dedicated member of the New Afrikan Black Panther Party - Prison Chapter. It offers a long exchange of letters between two prisoners on the subjects of racism, colonialism, and Marxism, as well as much other social commentary. The latter part of the book has a series of excellent essays on the same general topics. My response is that, although some of the letters seemed a little repetitive in nature, all of them gave a view of prison life and the thinking of basically political prisoners that is rarely seen in current literature. No matter what the reader's view is of Marxist theory, I highly recommend this book for its articulate and honest presentation of American and international cultural and economic problems.
