Hannah Miller had sought success and acclaim for her writing, and finally became a best-selling author. What she did not count on, however, was a physical and emotional collapse brought about by endless days of book tours, interviews, signings and too little sleep. After being released from the hospital, she went home to spend some time with her parents to allow her to recuperate and reassess her priorities.

Seeking a refuge to write and finish her recovery, Hannah went to live at her late grandmother's vacant home along the banks of the Wabash River in Indiana. When she decided to make a donation to the scholarship fund at the nearby university that was her mother's alma mater, she encountered Professor Brandon Tangier, head of the English department. The two experienced an immediate, mutual attraction. For Hannah the emotions were heightened by his mention of a spanking scene in her blockbuster young adult novel.

The conversation only served to open a floodgate of yearning for Hannah who had long held a suppressed desire to experience a spanking from a man like Brandon Tangier. But her 28th birthday was approaching, and Hannah sensed that Brandon was prepared to make that day a memorable milestone.

delightful story

By Laurel

This was a sweet story. Hannah writes a best seller and needs to retreat to a cosy cottage that was owned by her grandparents. She meets a collage professor and they fall in love. He also fulfills a lifelong dream of hers to be spanked and there are some erotic scenes.
