Good...Spoilers

I liked this one. I felt badly for Lily. I am glad that Kit realized how stupid he had been and I wish he would have had to work for Lily's love again. She just let him apologize, though heartfelt, and she forgave him. He treated her like crap. He took her virginity in the woods, which was fine because she loved him, but then was rude and dismissive towards her. Then he ignored her until he found out she was pregnant. She always believed in him and had faith that their love was real but at the first test, he believed another over her. I mean, he even said that he believed her dad because he did not know the man would lie like Lily did. I say, he did know Lily and apparently thought so little of the woman he said he loved. Who cares if you do not know the person telling you a harsh lie about the woman you love? That should make you believe them less not more!!! He was an idiot and I do not like that Lily knew he knew what he was doing when they made love the first time. He was in love with her for years and left her over a lie. She was waiting for him and what was he doing...sleeping around??? Classless and disgraceful man. I did like their story but he should have had to BEG for her. I also like how this author does not mention the numerous women her heroes have possibly been with. It makes it better to read about their love for their heroines without hearing that they are rakes or womanizers!!!

This storyline deviated somewhat for romance of the time period. The tension among the lovers kept me reading and hoping they realized their love before too late. I read romance with the expectation that love will win
